Charlotte Brontë wrote under the pseudonym of "Currer Bell." The novel was accepted by the publishers in October, 1847. The praise that Thackeray gave to the novel made it an immediate success, and the second edition was issued in January, 1848, dedicated to Thackeray. "Jane Eyre," Thackeray said, "is the master-work of a great genius."

ILLUSTRATIONS: Colored vignette on title-page, and fourteen crudely colored copperplate engravings, by William Mulready. Each plate has a descriptive head-line.

Bibliographers mention this book as having been originally issued in pink paper covers that later faded to a dark brown color. Though the engraved title-page is dated 1805, the type-title wrappers were variously dated, viz.: 1806, 1808, 1809, and 1818. It is very probable that this present copy never had any paper covers at all. The work was issued with plain and colored plates, though Livingston says: "The only copy seen has the plates uncolored." The book throughout is engraved on copper.

That Lamb is the author of this adaptation of the old nursery rhyme of "The King and Queen of Hearts" is proved by the holograph letter written by Charles Lamb to Wordsworth, dated February 1, 1806.

Except for its extreme rarity this little booklet is of insignificant interest, and has no literary value whatsoever.

P.," [sig. 1*,2], pp. [3]-4; "Introduction," [sig. 1*,3]-[sig. 1*,4], pp. [5]-8; "Explanation Of The Parts Of Shells," sig. 2,1-[sig. 2*,4], pp. [9]-20; "Classification," sig. 3,1-[sig. 3,2], pp. [21]-24; Text, sig. 4,1-sig. 14,1, pp. [25]-146; "Glossary," [sig. 14,2]-[sig. 14,4], pp. [147]-152; "Index," sig. 15,1-[sig. 15,2], ending with "Errata," in double signatures of twos and fours, pp. [153]-156; One final blank leaf. Signature 3 is two leaves, and sig. 14 is four leaves.

ILLUSTRATIONS: Inserted between pages 8 and 9 are twelve full-page plates, numbered 1 to 12.

"Poe's course in the composition of this work up to page 20 was undoubtedly irregular and reprehensible in not calling attention to the fact that the first twenty pages of the work, including preface, introduction, and explanation of the shells, were a close paraphrase of Captain Thomas Brown's 'Conchologist's Text Book,' published in Glasgow in 1837,—whence also Poe's plates are drawn. The remainder of the book is a bit of 'job work' arranged between Professor Wyatt, Professor McMurtrie, and Poe,—Poe's 'name being put to the work, as best known and most likely to aid in its circulation.'" "Guy Mannering," published February 4th, 1815, was, as was often remarked by Sir Walter Scott, the work of six weeks at Christmas time. It was written to meet financial obligations connected with Ballantyne. The publication by Messrs. Longman was, in the words of Scott, "letting them have this scent of roast meat, in case it should be necessary for us to apply to them, to renew bills in December." The first edition which consisted of 2000 copies was sold the day after its publication. Before the appearance of the first collected edition of the novels, the sale of this romance reached nearly 10000 copies. "Guy Mannering" has been said greatly to resemble Scott himself in his traits of a high-minded gentleman.

"The Antiquary" appeared early in May, 1816; 6000 copies of it were sold the first six days after its publication. It thus had a larger immediate sale than any of its predecessors. On May 16th, Scott wrote to his friend Morritt that it was again on the press. After a little pause it attained a popularity not inferior to that of "Guy Mannering."

The head-lines on the recto of the pages of Vol. I read: "The Black Dwarf"; of Vols. II-IV: "Old Mortality."

In less than six weeks of publication of the first series of the "Tales of my Landlord," two editions of 2000 copies each had been sold and a third edition of 2000 was put to press. "Old Mortality" was the author's first attempt to repeople the past by the power of imagination, working on the material furnished by books; the story is framed with a deeper skill than any of his preceding novels. Lockhart said that it had always appeared to him to be the "Marmion" of the Waverley novels.

All in duplicate signatures of fours and eights.

The running head-lines of Vols. I, II, and pages 4-131 of Vol. III, read on the recto: "The Bride of Lammermoor"; those of pages 137-333 of Vol. III and all of Vol. IV: "A Legend Of Montrose."

This edition contains numerous typographical errors, which arose from Scott's inability to oversee and correct the proof sheets. "The Bride of Lammermoor" is placed at about the same period as "The Pirate" (1700).

ERRORS IN PAGINATION: Vol. I, pages 151 to 158 are repeated in pagination.

It was first planned to give the impression that the above work was by an unknown author; to this end it was thought by printing it in a size and manner unlike "Waverley" and its successors, some subterfuge might be successfully put over the English public; however, later, this plan was abandoned; in consequence thereof "Ivanhoe" was issued in post octavo, on finer paper, and with better presswork than had been heretofore employed in Scott's novels. In the first issue 12000 copies were sold.

This novel was Scott's first attempt to make use of a continental theme. It depicts the period of the decay of chivalry in France under Louis XI (1470), who, with Charles the Bold, is the leading hero. The French king is depicted with detestable characteristics, and his nature is closely analyzed in the introduction to the novel. This novel established the reputation of Scott in France.

The fourth series of the "Tales of my Landlord" contains the two stories, "Count Robert of Paris" and "Castle Dangerous." Church and Lowndes state that it was published in 1831, but the date given on the title-page is 1832. In the Preface, dated October 15, 1831, written just before his trip to the Continent for his health, Scott took a touching farewell of his readers. On the 21st of September of the following year he passed out of this life.

SEYMOUR, ROBERT (1798-1836).

The Squib || Annual || Of || Poetry, Politics, And Personalities, ||
For MDCCCXXXVI. || With Twelve Designs By R. Seymour. ||
[Vignette.] || London: || Chapman And Hall, 186, Strand. ||
MDCCCXXXVI.

CONDITION: Small 8°, original pictorial boards, in white and black, sprinkled edges, uncut, enclosed in full red crushed levant morocco solar case.

FIRST EDITION.

COLLATION: Half-title, [A1] (verso blank), pp. [i]-[ii]; Title as above, [A2] (verso imprint), pp. [iii]-[iv]; Preface, [A3], pp. [v]-vi; Contents, [A4], pp. [vii]-viii; Text, B1-N1, ending with imprint, in eights, pp. [1]-178; Advertisements of works published by Chapman & Hall, [N2]-[N4], three leaves without pagination.

ILLUSTRATIONS: Frontispiece, and eleven full-page plates by Seymour. When "The Pickwick Papers" were begun, Seymour, then at the height of his popularity as an artist, was in the employ of Chapman and Hall. Some of his best drawings, early in 1836, had been issued in the little volume entitled "The Squib Annual." Seymour suggested to Chapman and Hall a series of "Cockney Sporting Plates," to be published in monthly parts. Hall secured the services of Dickens, who was then a young, obscure newspaper writer. This was the germ of "Pickwick." The first number of "The Pickwick Papers" contains four plates by Seymour, who committed suicide before the second number was issued, which contained the three remaining plates he had engraved. Thackeray then applied for the post left vacant by the death of Seymour, but his services were declined.

trations," one leaf (verso blank); Text, A1-[F3], in fours, pp. [1]-46; Imprint, [F4] (verso) (recto blank), one leaf without pagination.

ILLUSTRATIONS: Twenty-two colored plates, as called for in the list of illustrations, including frontispiece and pictorial title-page.

Three editions of this book were published in pink boards in 1847, but the first may be distinguished by the fact that it is the only one which contains no letter-press under the plate facing the title, and no advertisements on page 47. Melville, in speaking of it, writes: "Like its annual successors, 'Our Street,' 'Dr. Birch and his Young Friends,' 'The Kickleburys on the Rhine,' it . . . was such a success, that Thackeray determined to take advantage of its popularity by issuing in book form, through Messrs. Bradbury And Evans, the 'Snob Papers' and the 'Great Hoggarty Diamond.' In both these volumes his own name was printed on the title-page; but he had still a sneaking fondness for his favorite pseudonym, and all his 'Christmas Books,' including 'The Rose and the Ring,' bore the superscription of 'M. A. Titmarsh.'" Thackeray worked on the sketches for this book during his Mediterranean trip in 1844.

ILLUSTRATIONS: Sixteen full-page plates by the author, including frontispiece and pictorial title-page. There is also a woodcut on page 45. The illustration on the cover was not repeated.

This was the second of Thackeray's "Christmas Books." It was originally published in pink glazed boards. There were two editions published in the year 1848; the first with colored plates, and those of the second being in uncolored state. As no list was issued with the book the plates should be counted to see if all are present.

ERROR IN SIGNATURE: In No. VI, sig. N1 is unnumbered.

The history of "Vanity Fair" was almost identical with that of Dickens' "Pickwick Papers." The earlier numbers failed to attract attention, and the discontinuance of further publication was seriously considered. Later the sales greatly increased and then success was assured. What caused the change in its reception is problematical. Some attribute it to a most favorable notice in the "Edinburgh Review," others to Charlotte Brontë's dedication of "Jane Eyre" to Thackeray, in which she eulogizes and praises him; still others to the popularity and success of the first "Christmas Book."

The following points are found only in the first issue:

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

In No. I, p. 1, the heading, "Vanity Fair," is in rustic type; Nos. I-IV have quotation marks around the word "Punch" in the list of works by Thackeray, which in the remaining numbers are omitted; Nos. XVII, XVIII, and XIX & XX, have no bracket after the number of the part or before the word "Price"; on p. 336, a woodcut of the Marquis of Steyne appears, which was suppressed in the second edition and that of 1849, and the type from pp. 336-440 was moved forward to fill the vacancy, but in later editions this woodcut again appears; on p. 453, the text reads "Mr. Pitt," later changed to "Sir Pitt"; the illustrated advertisement of the "Great Hoggarty Diamond," in the last number, was omitted in later issues.

The three drawings in No. II, pp. 44-45, together with two full pages of text, have been dropped in all editions after that of 1849. All the numbers of the present copy have the date on the cover-title.

ILLUSTRATIONS: There are forty full-page plates, as called for in the list of plates, including the frontispiece and engraved title-page, and numerous woodcuts in the text, all by Thackeray. In Nos. I, II, III, IV, VI, VIII, X, and XI the original tissues are still remaining between the plates.

Original Drawings || For || Vanity Fair || By || W. M. Thackeray ||
"Amelia Waiting" || "Studies Of The Miss Osbornes"

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

CONDITION: 4°, full blue crushed levant morocco, gilt back and inside borders, red watered-silk doublures and fly-leaves, edges gilt, by Rivière, enclosed in cloth case. The Samuel Henry Austin copy with bookplate.

COLLATION: Title as above on front-cover. The contents are an original water-color study for the woodcut "Amelia Waiting," found on p. 447, with pencil sketches of heads, and two original pencil studies of Mrs. Wynne as "Miss Osborne." On one leaf Lady Ritchie, the daughter of Thackeray, has written, "These drawings for Vanity Fair by my Father W M Thackeray have been in my possession since his death" (signed) "Anne Ritchie." Inserted is a letter from Anne Ritchie to Mr. Charles Sessler, dated July 4th, 1913, in which she says that the Vanity Fair drawings were done in Young Street, Kensington, and that she remembers Eugénie Crowe visiting them and sitting and standing for her father, and she was "Amelia" and the "Miss Osbornes" in turn, and that she soon after married Mr. Wynne.

The introduction which Lady Ritchie wrote to the Biographical Edition of Thackeray published by Harper in 1897, in which these drawings are reproduced, 8°, is inserted.

ILLUSTRATIONS: There are twenty-three engravings as called for in the list of plates, an engraved title-page, and numerous initials and woodcuts in the text, all by the author.

Volume II. Engraved title-page, [A1] (verso blank), pp. [i]-[ii]; Title as above (except for volume number and date, 1850), [A2] (verso imprint), pp. [iii]-[iv]; (The Dedication and Preface, pp. [v]-[viii], which are bound in the first volume should be bound in here in the second volume, which accounts for the hiatus in pagination); "Contents," [A3], pp. [ix]-x; "List of Plates," [A4], pp. [xi]-xii; Text, B1-[Z8] and AA1-[BB2], ending with imprint, in eights, pp. [1]-372.

ILLUSTRATIONS: There are twenty-three engravings as called for in the list of plates, an engraved title-page, and numerous initials and woodcuts in the text.

This work was originally issued in twenty-four monthly parts in twenty-three numbers. After the appearance of the eleventh number (Sept. 1849) the publication was suspended during three months owing to the illness of the author; the twelfth number therefore bears the date of Jan., 1850. The present copy contains the thirty-nine chapters in Vol. I, as made up from the parts. When Thackeray revised this work for publication in book form he cut out a portion of chapters xvi and xvii and consolidated the two into one, leaving but thirty-eight chapters, and sacrificing two illustrations, on pages 149 and 150.

pp. [vii]-viii; Text, B1-[O3], ending with imprint, in fours, pp. [1]-102; Advertisements of Chapman And Hall, [O4] (verso blank), one leaf without pagination. Pink engraved glazed-paper back-cover is bound in at end.

ILLUSTRATIONS: Eight full-page colored plates, including frontispiece, also two woodcuts in the text, all by Richard Doyle. The illustration on the cover is not repeated in the work. The title-page illustration is usually uncolored, even in copies with colored plates.

The first five lines of the title-page are engraved in rustic type.

In some of the parts of "David Copperfield" an advertisement of this book is to be found, giving as a kind of second title, "A Story for Christmas (and indeed of any other season), containing Perilous Adventures, Tremendous Battles, Tender Love-making, Profound Historical Knowledge, and a (tolerably) Happy Ending." This is dated 1st December, 1849. This book was written as a burlesque continuation of Scott's "Ivanhoe," the foundation of the tale appearing in "Fraser's Magazine," 1846. It was reprinted in "Littell's Living Age" the same year, and translated into Spanish and published in Madrid in 1882.

The present work, in book form, differs greatly from the original. The Preface is dated Kensington, December 20th, 1849. Owing to an illness of Thackeray, the illustrations were made by Richard Doyle. This work is often included in the list of "Christmas Books."

Advertisements of Smith, Elder & Co., on yellow end-papers and yellow fly-leaves, identical with Volume II.

"Henry Esmond" is ranked among the greatest works of historical fiction. It was first published in three volumes, and not in monthly parts as had been Thackeray's previous novels, and the first issue was printed in the obsolete type of the Queen Anne reign.

Thackeray visited America as a lecturer in 1852, and was on his voyage when "Esmond" made its appearance, as he states in his dedication.

"The London of 'Esmond'—is virtually the London of the eighteenth century. It was the age of the splendid, embroidered, beruffled, snuff-boxed, red-heeled, impertinent Folly, that withal knew how to make itself respected. It was the age of the bel air and the dignified mein, of perukes and powder and paint, when gallantry was the recognised pursuit and morality was at nearly so low an ebb as in that period of mad excesses, the Restoration. It was the age when men drank deep and swore heavily, when swords were drawn on the slightest provocation and women were left widows through the consequences of careless words uttered by excited men at the gaming-tables. It was the age of three-bottle men and of all-night sittings at taverns. The 'pace' of the viveurs of the day was awful." (Lewis Melville in "Some Aspects of Thackeray," pp. 180-181.)

The present copy is of the earliest issue, before the sixteen pages of advertisements were inserted at the end of Volume III, and is also the "Dedication Copy" presented to Lord Ashburton, who was British commissioner of the Ashburton-Webster treaty. He was well-known in America, his mother having been an American. The presentation inscription is not in the handwriting of Thackeray, but is recorded in that of the recipient, which fact is explained in the dedication: "My volumes will reach you when the Author is on his voyage to a country where your name is as well known as here. Wherever I am, I shall gratefully regard you; and shall not be the less welcomed in America because I am your obliged friend and servant," dated London, Oct. 18, 1852. This is undoubtedly the first copy of the book presented on behalf of the author. On the first half-title of each volume is stamped within a double circle, the Ashburton initial, "Melchet Court, Romsey."

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

ILLUSTRATIONS: Eight full-page plates, including frontispiece, and forty-eight woodcuts in the text, all by the author.

This was the last of Thackeray's "Christmas Books," and was issued only with uncolored plates, of which there is no list. Five years intervened between this "Christmas Book" and its predecessor, "The Kickleburys On The Rhine." This book was written in Rome in 1854. A second and a third edition appeared the same year, and it was also published by Harper and Bro. in 1855, with fifty-nine uncolored illustrations. Up to the time of writing this story, Thackeray wrote with a gold pen and broke his favorite one while making these sketches, after which he began to use a quill pen.
